

MRS. NAGG AND MR.

By Roy L. McCardell.

Who Is Not Superstitious, but It Is Very Strange that Some People Are Always Fortunate!

I SUPPOSE you are not interested in anything I say, Mr. Nagg, and that is why I sit silent and let you do all the talking, but I am not altogether a fool, Mr. Nagg, and you might as well understand it!

I could show you the elegant diploma I got at Mrs. Swoshel's Select School for Girls of the Better Classes in Brooklyn. It was the most select school in Brooklyn and went in for culture more than anything else; culture, physical and mental, and piano, algebra and French conversations extra.

And no one, no one, Mr. Nagg, received a diploma unless they took the extras, and if you took all the extras the diploma was handsomely framed, and it wasn't in English, but in Latin, and nobody understood what it was about. But it was all very elegant and refined, and it was quite a compensation to parents who had been frantically overcharged by Mrs. Swoshel to see that no partiality was displayed and any pupil that paid for the extras could get a diploma, and any upstart that tried to get through Mrs. Swoshel's school cheaply was shown that there would be no discrimination.

How much better that is than the modern system, where any ruff-raff has precedence if it reads or ophers better than the child of cultured people who, in the days of Mrs. Swoshel's establishment, could pay for all the extras and then, if the child thought it too much mental strain to take the extra courses, it got its Latin diploma nicely framed, after all.

Oh, you need not look at me that way! I know that modern methods of education are grossly inadequate, but, thank goodness, I went to Mrs. Swoshel's and parents could attend the school affairs and speak graciously to other people they met there, because any child that went to Mrs. Swoshel's must have parents that could afford to pay the awful prices Mrs. Swoshel asked.

But the school got so exclusive that finally nobody went at all, and Mrs. Swoshel sold out to a Belgian lady who sued her for obtaining money under false pretenses, and that's why I say I have had a good education.

Yet, after all, and you can't deny it, Mr. Nagg, it is all luck in this world. If it wasn't, why shouldn't Brother Willie be as well off as the young Vanderbilts?

Willie is just as proud as they are, and yet when he secures employment people get so jealous of him because he knows more than they do that they conspire against him and have him resign and even accuse him of taking things and pawing them!

Why should Mrs. Stryver have things better in this world than I have simply because she inherited some money? There's a woman I despise, and yet she seems to have nothing but luck. The other day Mrs. Dubb walked down the street with me and she had on her ridiculous old plush doorman trimmed with moth-eaten fur of the style of ten years ago, and who should we meet but Mrs. Stryver in her new black lace dress!

I was never so mortified in my life. I fairly had to run away from Mrs. Dubb, pretending I had an engagement with Mrs. Stryver, and Mrs. Dubb is a good soul and I don't care what you say about her, I am her friend, and when I am anybody's friend I am sincere!

But Mrs. Dubb has no right to place me in such a position, and I had to pretend to Mrs. Stryver, the stupid, stuck-up thing, that I hardly knew Mrs. Dubb, and that she was an impossible person.

It goes against my best feelings to do anything of that sort, but I can't be a hypocrite, and if Mrs. Dubb will wear that old doorman what can she expect?

So, that's why I say it is all luck in this world!

What are you staring at, Mr. Nagg? I know what I am talking about!

The Cross-Eyed Man

And His Chum, (the Man With the Whiskers).

"YES," observed the Cross-Eyed Man as he and the Man with the Whiskers boarded the subway express at Seventy-second street and seated themselves on opposite sides of the aisle, "I followed the Meadowbrook house yesterday. I—" "Where did you follow them to?" suddenly roared the Man with the Whiskers.

"To the fox of course. It was a splendid run of eighteen miles, and—" "Who was?" "The run, of course. It was my first ride with the Houndstooth Hunt and—" "You said you ran," interrupted the Man with the Whiskers, sternly. "I said it was a run. That's what they call a fox-hunt in England."

Self-Defense by Mail.

Worm—Oh, I'm afraid I can't hypnotize this fish, and I've taken lessons in hypnotism by mail for a whole year. I'm did you think you'd like one for a pet, or did you want credit as a discoverer, or did you think the fox would be glad to meet you or—" "It is sport," interrupted the Cross-Eyed Man with cold dignity. "The house follow the fox. We riders follow the hounds and—" "What does the fox follow?" eagerly asked the Man with the Whiskers. "His own master," replied the Cross-Eyed Man, "because that's their nature. Then we ride home to the clubhouse in the twilight, and—" "And have a delicious fox pie for dinner and—" "We don't eat him," said the Cross-Eyed Man. "If you're just out for sport, I should think it would be better sport to kill an insurance agent or a plumber or a janitor or—" "You miss the point of the whole thing. It's the excitement of the run, you know. There's nothing like a fox hunt for excitement. At the state we broke through the line for a five-yard gain, and clinched to avoid punishment, but it was forty-love, with light and baffling winds on the weather bow and a nine-hole course with Mathewson in the box and ten men on bases, and a strike and two spares to our credit, and the favorite's odds hammered down to 2 to 1. It was a wild night on the moors, and—" "But not as wild as if it were twice as wild."

"Maybe not, but a lot wilder than if it were only half as."

"Next time you follow the hounds," observed the Man with the Whiskers, enthusiastically, "I'll follow them with you. To Bloomfield Asylum in the corner."

"I'm about to say," angrily interrupted the Man with the Whiskers, "that we'll follow them clear to—" "South Ferry!" squeaked the Guard. "All out!"

WILLIE WARBLER, & & the Chain-Lightning Poet.

The Bosses and the big machines
For weeks have been the "go."
But now machines must take back seats
And give the Horse a Show!

Pop the Cannon! Swat the drum!
Mr. Battenberg has come!
Fill him up on beer and pie!
Name your drink Lou! We will buy!

See through all this bustling land
Bust machines on every hand!
While the bosses, terror-haunted,
Post the "ad": "Machinists Wanted!"

Gentler footballs in demand
Roughness now is sternly banned,
From the field the brute is hissed
Who would slap the half-back's wrist.

The Zoo Vaudeville

By D. A. Ryan.

Billy—Now, what are you crying for?
Tommy—No matter how much I like Rhino—Why, that's easy. I proposed to my rich wife with it.

Where He Got Culture.

Lady—That looks like a very intelligent dog.
Kid—You bet. He comes from where intelligence is cheap. He's a Boston terrier.

The Fortune Teller.

By T. O. McGill.

OOKOOLAH, the Egyptian, sat on the throne of oak. Wood throw was used to read the moon bird when I called last night. I laid the coin in the hollow elephant tooth and put the written words of my guest in the clumbering coils of the tiny brandy bound with brass from a prophet's tomb. As the smoke curled up from the blackening ashes from the paper Zookoolah unfolded the meshes of the bead work in the star ball, and as it ran through her fingers the blacks and the reds ran together in a solid stream.

"It seems a favorable thing," said Zookoolah as she brushed back a wisp of hair from her eyes that she might interpret the bead colors better. She ran the beads again, and as she looked closely at them she said: "I see a long journey and a pleasant people." "That starts good," I said, as I settled myself for the rest of the prediction. "There will be much confusion and many men and struggling women. There is trouble and turmoil but the heads tell me you will come through the strife safely." "I see you and a dark woman in a quiet land where people sleep much and here and there I see children and plants. It is a neighborly land, with an abundance of things that are good for the palate. I see a feast and a merry throng and time moves swiftly. "There is music and laughter, with here and there the clanging of bells. I see you and the dark woman again on a journey, but it ends well, 'twill be a safe journey," said Zookoolah, as she restored the beads in the star ball. "What was the quest?" she asked, as I took my hat to go. "We've got an invitation to go to Brooklyn for dinner, and I wanted to see the finish if I could."

An Example.

Little Hector—Pa, what's an incongruity?
The Weary Parrot—Well, er, I guess a policeman wearing a wide-awake hat would be a pretty fair sample of one!

THE NEW PLAY

ALICE NIELSEN

Merely Acceptable in
"Don Pasquale."

IN spirit the audience at the Casino yesterday afternoon was from Alice Nielsen's native State. It was there with a most friendly disposition toward the returned American singer, but at the same time it was there to have Miss in her prize picture furs. It was an audience to try the soul and quality of any singer.

Alice Nielsen as Norina in "Don Pasquale."

Nielsen show it what four years of hard work abroad had done for her. It was an audience with both a glad hand and a critical ear. It was an audience such as only Broadway could gather. In one box that King of High C, Caruso, swelled in all the glory of one of his hundred famous waistcoats; in an opposite box sat the press agent's Queen of Song, Miss Lillian Russell, resplendent.

Mediocrity marked the other performers. Alfredo Rosa was an unintentionally funny Don Pasquale. Francesco Prati a boyish Ernesto and Filippo Prati an indifferent Dr. Malatesta. The performance missed fire. It merely smoked in the place.

Mr. Jose Van den Berg conducted to the best of his ability, and a prompt in the wings sounded like a soda fountain on a hot day.

CHARLES DARNTON.

About the Cleverest of Birds.

I WONDER how many know that by getting a young crow before it is able to fly and by patience and perseverance for a few days, or perhaps weeks, it can be taught to talk, and after the first few words that it learns to pronounce it learns much faster than any child that I ever knew or heard of. Among wild crows I never have seen one that talked, so I cannot say whether talking would frighten crows or not, but I presume it would. I wish that a pair of talking crows could be mated, and raise a brood to see whether they would teach their young to use human speech, says a writer in Field and Stream.

One of the talking crows that I have known was owned by a man of the name of Lew Lohdy, who kept a hotel in Potosky, Mich., and his wife one day, in a fit of anger, for some misdemeanor that the crow had cut up, grabbed him and took him out in the yard and chopped his head off, the crow shouting, "Oh, don't! Oh, don't!" as she carried him to the block.

I don't know that all crows could be taught to talk, for it seems reasonable to me that some of them might be much more intelligent than others. I have known three talking crows, and they all spoke in a higher key than people commonly do, but not more so than a few persons that I have known; but their talk is very much plainer than that of any parrot, and a crow does not use a lot of meaningless words, and he knows what he is talking about.

One of these crows was owned by a man that lived in Cene, Upper Michigan. I don't know if the crow was either a living one or not, for it has been a long time since I was there, but I know of a knowledge and command of wit and repartee that would beat the best criminal lawyer that ever tried to tangle a witness in his evidence.

News from Out the Tall Grass.

BOONEVILLE (Miss.) Banner: Mr. Dock Davis was run into camp by a wampus. Dock was completely exhausted and as white as a sheet. He remarked: "Boys, this is nothing to laugh at."

Newbern (Tenn.) Chronicle: We never did like turnip greens, anyway, but we can get on the outside of as much strawberry shortcake as any man of our calibre—except Sam Cole.

Mayfield (Ky.) Messenger: Guy Byrd, the Messenger carrier boy on Route No. 3, will be at home to you each evening with the Messenger crisp from the press. Treat him nice and, as he is a nice little man, he will do the proper caper by you.

Kahoka, (Ill.) Courier: An apology is due the general public on account of a misleading statement which appeared in the Courier's announcement of the Morris-Rench wedding. Recent developments clearly show that, in stating "the groom is a bright and competent young man," the wrong adjective was used.

Antwerp (Ohio) Bee: We have held conversations with men of brains and achievements, but never tried to talk to any one until they were thoroughly disgusted with our presence; neither have we ever boasted of being a grammarian nor posed as a critic; neither have we ever, through the columns of our paper, called the people of this or any other town base names, but we know of an editor—and he doesn't live in Texas—who has done such disgusting things. A man (?) with a swelled head is of little consequence to any community.

Salem (O.) Herald: Mrs. Richard Pow and daughter, Miss Carrie, were driving on Perry street, when their horse took fright, wheeled suddenly, throwing the occupants out and turning the buggy on its side.

Mrs. Pow was badly bruised in places, but was not seriously injured, and the daughter escaped without any injury, but was badly scared.

Mrs. Pow was feeling much improved as a result of the accident when inquiry was made at the house late this afternoon.
